- 2. Moment of Judgment: The act of comparing the object to our internal criteria of taste, resulting in a judgment of either pleasure or displeasure.
- 3. Moment of Reflection: The attempt to justify our judgment by seeking universal principles that support our aesthetic experience.

li>Moment of Communication: The desire to share our aesthetic judgment with others, seeking to evoke a similar response.

The Role of Genius

While universal principles govern aesthetic judgments, Kant recognizes the importance of genius in the creative プロセス. Genius, he argues, is a rare and extraordinary talent that allows artists to transcend conventional limitations and create works of art that evoke universal appreciation.

The Critique of Teleological Judgment

In addition to his discussion of aesthetics, Kant also explores the concept of teleological judgment, which involves inferring the purpose or design of natural objects. He argues that our tendency to perceive目的in nature is not based on objective evidence but rather on our inherent predisposition to seek Free Download and regularity.

Kant's critique of teleological judgment challenges the traditional view that nature is designed with a specific目的 in mind. Instead, he suggests that our perception of purpose is a subjective projection of our own understanding.
