Through his evocative and deeply personal poems, Daring explores the core tenets of Rastafari: the divinity of Emperor Haile Selassie I, the importance of repatriation to Africa, and the struggle against oppression. His words resonate with the rhythms of reggae music, capturing the pulsating heartbeat of Jamaican culture.

In "Jah's Children," Daring paints a vivid portrait of the Rastafari people, their unwavering faith depicted as a beacon of hope in a world of adversity:

We are Jah's children, strong and free,
Our roots run deep in Africa's soil,

We are the ones who fought for liberty,
And we will continue to struggle, until we reach our goal.

Daring's poetry is not only a celebration of Rastafari culture but also a powerful voice of resistance against oppression and injustice. In "Babylon System," he unleashes a scathing critique of the corrupt political and economic structures that have marginalized and enslaved the people of Jamaica:

Babylon system is a wicked game,
That keeps us down and robs us of our name,

It's a system of control and domination,
That steals our freedom and our liberation.

Yet, amidst the struggles and injustices, Daring's poetry offers a message of hope and redemption. In "Rasta Love," he celebrates the transformative power of love and unity, as the Rastafari people strive to create a better world:

Rasta love is a powerful force,

That can heal the wounds and unite the source,

It's a love that knows no boundaries,

And it will guide us to a better destiny.
